VOLUNTEERS NEEDED ON NATIONAL PUBLIC LANDS DAY

Jennings Randolph Lake, W.V. – To celebrate the 12th Annual National Public Lands Day, the staff at Jennings Randolph Lake together with the Mineral County Parks and Recreation Commission will clean-up the shoreline along the North Branch of the Potomac River in Barnum, West Virginia on Saturday, September 24, 2005. The event is scheduled from 9 a.m. to noon.

Volunteers interested in participating should meet at the Barnum Whitewater Put-In Area and should wear appropriate clothing, such as boots and gloves. Volunteers should also bring something to drink as no water is available in the area.

“Thousands of volunteers, including those in the Potomac Highlands, will gather on National Public Lands Day and prove how much they care about these wonderful public places,” said Robb Hampton, director of National Public Lands Day. “Each year, more and more Americans come out to lend a hand on this special Saturday in September, and we invite everyone to join us.”

For more information or to join the list of volunteers, contact a member of the Jennings Randolph Lake ranger staff at 304/355-2346 or see a list of National Public Lands sites, activities, contacts, and downloadable photos from past events, in the Media Center section of www.publiclandsday.org, or call 1-800-VOL-TEER (800-865-8337).
